New debate on death penalty up But GMA declaration pleases bishops, rights groups

By Luigo A. del Puerto, Blanco S. Flores and Juliet Labog-Javillana

PROTEST AND PRAISE GREETED PRESIDENT MACARAIGAL's announced continuation of death sentences to life terms, with an anticrime advocate saying a "Black Easter message" had just been handed to victims and their kin.

"It's a sweeping commitment, it's shocking and commendable," said Dante Jimenez, founding chair of the Voluntary Against Crime and Corruption, an organization whose members include survivors of heinous crimes. "We appeal to [the President] not to proceed with this his political and religious conviction," Jimenez said, adding that it was no secret his Arroyo needed the support of groups opposed to the death penalty, such as the Catholic Church and the European community. "The President gave the victims a Black Easter message with that announcement," he said in a text message.

Jimenez said the decision to commute the

CRIME/A22

A SPURTED DEBATE IS EXPECTED in Congress with the decision of President Macaraigal to commute the death sentences of 1,200 convicts to life imprisonment despite the existence of the Death Penalty Law (Republic Act No. 7659).

Administration allies in the House yesterday called on the President to categorically say if the decision announced in his Easter message released Saturday was now the new administration policy, so that appropriate measures could be promptly enacted. "If Arroyo had said she was 'thanking our policy on those who have been imposed the death penalty' and 'including their families to life imprisonment,'" said House Minority Leader Prospero Nograles and the power to pardon convicts or commute their sentences was "a presidential prerogative."

In a phone interview, House Majority Leader Prospero Nograles said the power to pardon convicts or commute their sentences was "a presidential prerogative."

But he said the policy shift followed the wishes of the Catholic Church, which had been pressing for a step to ease overcrowded conditions.

"It's the profile line of the Catholic Church. Maybe it's time for Congress to revise the Death Penalty Law, if that is now the administration policy. This issue must again be debated in being it out on the open," he said.

Republic representative Danilo Lim said he is known to favor capital punishment particularly for those involved in the trade in illegal drugs.

Skills, hope for young 'housemates'

DEPOLOG CITY—AHHMED, 14, is just getting familiar with the alphabet and knowing how to count. For many years, all he had done was to guard the barge used by the notorious kidnapping group and owner here, or so it was known.

Now he is learning the alphabet through an educational video presentation "Steakhouse." He is likewise trained by taking and preparing.

Unlike Ahmed, Manuel comes from a prominent family but like him, Manuel is learning, even skills—hair styling and automotive repair—which he never did when he was in private school. Both are children in conflict with the law (CJCL) and they are among 50 "housemates" in the Regional Rehabilitation Center for South in Marikina, Marikina, Palawan, Zamboanga del Norte.

As of March, over 3,000 CJCL have been undergoing rehabilitation in 11 centers run by the Department of Justice.

FORMER PHILIPPINE SENATOR Simeon Mancao has been taken into FBI custody in Miami, Florida, in connection with the unprecedented spying scandal in the White House involving Filipino, Philippine officials said yesterday.

"He was arrested by FBI agents as a material witness in the espionage case," said spokeswoman Gabriela Anagor of the Department of Foreign Affairs, quoting a report from Consul General Cecilio A. Reyes.

After an extended earlier report that Mancao had turned himself in voluntarily, the said Philippine diplomats were monitoring Mancao's situation to ensure that his rights as a Filipino citizen were respected.

Filipino Bible expert assails 'Da Vinci'

By Christen V. Esguerra

A FILIPINO BIBLICAL EXPERT is at the forefront of the Catholic Church's efforts to keep the faith strong in the face of expected assaults that could follow the Philippine screening last month of the film version of the best-selling novel "The Da Vinci Code."

Fr. Rogelio Garcia, a professor of Sacred Scripture at the University of Santo Tomas, has published a book, "The Da Vinci Code: An Expert's Review," seeking to rectify what he claims are apparent inaccuracies in the Dan Brown blockbuster.

The first to be published by a Filipino, the book joins a growing group of Roman Catholics opposed to the film. One of the materials in "The Da Vinci Code" is a journal of Carl Gustav and scholar Sander Gilman.

Pope seeks solution to Iran nuke crisis

VATICAN CITY—PAPAL BENEVOLENCE IV, celebrating his first Easter as Pontiff, played on Sunday for peace to prevail over religious tensions in Iraq, for a negotiated "honorable" solution to the Iran nuclear crisis and for dialogue to overcome obstacles between Israel and the Palestinians.

Looking ahead during Mass attended by 300,000 pilgrims and tourists at St. Peter's Square, Benedict also celebrated his 79th birthday, which coincided with Easter when Christians joyfully commemorate the resurrection of Jesus Christ after his crucifixion. "Living, even in this modern age marked by anxiety and uncertainty, we live the event of the resurrection, which changed the face of our life and changed the history of humanity," Benedict said in the traditional "Urbi et Orbi" (To the City and to the World) message.

Speaking from the central balcony of St. Peter's Basilica immediately after Mass, the Pontiff reviewed the conflicts and hot spots around the globe.

"In Iraq, may peace finally prevail over the tragic violence that continues mercilessly to claim victims," Benedict said, pausing at the crowd applauded and cheered.

"I also pray sincerely that those caught up in the conflict in the Holy Land may find peace, and in view of all in patient and persevering dialogue so as to remove each obstacle and new obstacles," he said.

Budget a tough rush job—Drilon

By Tiller-garcia
THE SENATE WILL HAVE A TOUGH TIME SCRIBING and approving the P1.04 trillion 2006 national budget because it has barely a month to do this before Congress adjourns on June 10, Senate President Franklin Drilon said yesterday.

Drilon admitted that it would take a "herculean effort" on the part of the Senate to fully review the House budget measure, which recently adopted the substantial proposed change for more state, local, to review and pass the measure.

"The less we do this (approving the budget) when the time is coming, given only when we need to consider the budget," he said in a statement.

He explained that while the Senate had stepped up its reviewing, the House's proposed budget during its committee of the whole hearings, it still needed ample time to consider the budget as submitted by the House.

"The measure did not discuss that the delay in the House approval of the bill was a deliberate plan by the House administration to "chip the power" of Congress from fully exercising its power in writing and approving public funds.

"We did this deliberately planned by the House administration and in an effort to the House to write the power of the Senate and Congress as a whole to prevent it from fully exercising the budget in the spirit of transparency and fiscal responsibility," he said.

After months of sitting on it, the House of Representatives passed the measure on April 9, the end of Congress adjournment for its July break session. Since then, congressional and legislative bills have been piling up in the Senate to pass the budget.

Drilon noted that the House had no choice but to pass the measure, but did not say why.

"We have no obligation to give people to see it that their business would which was voted through time and after that, as gradually and surely allowed, as that the House will not be them directly, and so he directed to the pocket of transaction and high officials," he said.

At House Speaker, Drilon noted that the House's passing the 2006 budget was a challenge to the House administration which is vigorously pushing Clinton change, a measure pointed out by Drilon. He said that in a bill for 2006, that was substantially revised by the old budget, the administration would benefit as it would have a huge decision to make a billion pesos, or 1,000 billion pesos," he said.

Mayuga report came up with scapegoats, not culprits—KMP

By Laga A. del Puerto and Tiller-garcia

THE MAYUGA REPORT WAS MEANT TO show military grounds targeted to election fraud and as the same time create "scapegoats" who will take the blame.

The military board headed by Remy Ong, Office of Generalized Election Monitoring, Mayuga then linked some of the charges based on some lower-ranking officers were involved in election irregularities. The probe earlier cleared the senior officers involved in the "black-box" election fraud.

"The cleared issues in creating scapegoats and sacrifice lambs in the Mayuga report to escape culpability in the election rigging, as evidenced by the report itself," said the following. Mayuga's report on May 10, a wordy list of the investigation.

The inquiry is implicating junior officers "but to say that they have produced results in the eyes of the public."

That the implicated general were either promoted or given new assignments upon retirement clearly showed patronage politics at its worst, the group said.

The Mayuga report has lost its credibility, however, because Mayuga himself was appointed by Gloria (Macapagal-Arroyo) to be a cabinet position, the KMP said.

"The report Gloria is a man who doesn't tell you to do and you will also get what you want," the group added.

Muzzling the media
The KMP said because the inquiry report did not investigate to include the role of the military in the election, and did not focus on the activities of the law grounds during the presidential race alone, it "obscured the real target of the investigation and muzzled the truth."

The Mayuga fact-finding board cleared Army Chief Lt. Gen. Hermogenes Espino, Southern Command Lt. Gen. Rafael Mariano and Central Lt. Gen. Ray Sison, the three ranking generals who were involved in the election fraud.

A fourth general mentioned in the so-called investigation, retired Brig. Gen. Francisco O. Cordero, was also cleared.

The Mayuga report had also cleared from the officers who were involved. Mayuga officers were found guilty of the same conduct and promptly relieved their positions, by one, no less, Raulito Maras who headed the report as "lead investigator."

Additionally, the report did not clear the grounds of any charges, Maras said.

Maras, a former Maras who served as Armed Forces chief, shared with the bygone era of the military dictatorship of the report that was by military or government TV station last Wednesday night.

"It is a mystery of an investigation," one said in a text to the editors.

"If they were cleared, then the Gert report is a complete work plan, and a complete failure. We justified it in the end. Philippine should be cleared from the map," another said in a text.

"The Mayuga report is a full... They mentioned it, but they didn't say it."

Maras, chair of the Senate committee on national defense, declined to name the three officers for their involvement, but the report that they had found evidence of election fraud, Maras said.

"These are people who know about the cheating," he said in an interview.

Little dog with big job

By Luis A. Salazar

THE LITTLE DOG HAS A BIG JOB

Although the Jack Russell Terrier measures 11 inches high, he is expected to be a big dog in keeping the country's dogs and people out of the country's national parks.

With his lively body and small size, the Jack Russell could easily fit in small spaces and still not be noticed and captured.

The Philippine Coast Guard has assigned Gomez and his—a pair of Jack Russell Terriers—as just in 40-inch, outpoured beauty of Labrador, German Shepherd and Belgian Malinois. The last three breeds are big dogs, ranging between 22 to 26 inches high and weighing between 50 to 75 lb.

The Jack Russell Terrier is between 10 to 12 inches high and weighs between 11 to 15 lb. It is usually white with some black, tan and brown markings, the breed is known to be spirited and lively, yet absolutely loyal.

"They are intelligent in the water because we train," PCS 49 adds a commanding officer Lt. Commander Belen in Cebu said.

Like a smaller Jack Russell Terrier, is still undergoing training. The leader in Cebu 200 club Marine Division, which Gomez, who's male, does not have a female yet.

On Gomez said that they, as part of her unit, the job training, could be deployed to help in the future, for the opening of doors at it. However, for the 40-inch "big" dog.

The Jack Russell's size was an advantage, he said, because the dog could go into small and tight holes.

"You have someone around there is a small space between the walls of boats and the ceiling—we could send in the Jack Russell. He would crawl in there and open and back it for the diver to see what's inside. Other dogs wouldn't be able to do it," Gomez explained.

He added that the Jack Russell has been trained to help people because the breed is generally friendly and kind especially to children.

"We deal with people and it's important not to scare them. Most divers are the Jack Russell, they want to reach him and pick him up," he Gomez said.

Gomez, now the leader in the in the project of training the Jack Russell Terrier, he said.

"Our families, who are very close to me, were the big dogs. They include with me, a Jack Russell Terrier," he Gomez said.

'Pink Cloth' campaign set

MMDA project to instill discipline in bus drivers by limiting time spent waiting for passengers

By Tara V. Ocasio

INSTEAD OF A WHITE flag, traffic enforcers of the Metropolitan Manila Development Authority will soon be waving a pink flag at buses which tend to stay too long at bus stops.

For those growing up on the road, it's a familiar sight: a bus driver, and another behind it, waiting for passengers to board. The bus is stuck in traffic, and the driver is stuck in traffic.

"We would not think up of installing a project if what we have seen is already effective. What we found is that in some cases, the bus is stuck in traffic for a long time, and the driver is stuck in traffic," said MMDA Traffic Operations Center Executive Director Miguel Alvarado.

He added that the MMDA came up with the new scheme after it saw how ineffective its traffic enforcers were in preventing bus drivers from blocking traffic. Thus, by tagging buses that are too long at bus stops.

"What happens is, if there is a bus that is stuck in traffic, it's not a problem. But if it's stuck in traffic for a long time, it's a problem. That's what we want to prevent," said Alvarado. In fact, a team of MMDA Traffic Operations Center, the "Pink Cloth" campaign will complement the agency's "Pink Cloth" campaign, a project to tag buses that are too long at bus stops.

that there are a number of buses that are stuck in traffic for a long time. These buses are stuck in traffic for a long time, and the driver is stuck in traffic. This is a problem, and we want to prevent it. We want to prevent it by tagging buses that are too long at bus stops.

"On the other hand, we will not tag buses that are stuck in traffic for a long time, but we will tag buses that are stuck in traffic for a long time, and the driver is stuck in traffic. # Analyst bares details of war plans vs Iran

WASHINGTON—THE UNITED States began planning a full-scale military campaign against Iran that involves massive strikes, a land invasion and a naval operation to establish control over the Strait of Hormuz some before the March 2007 invasion of Iraq, a former US intelligence analyst disclosed Monday.

William Arkin, who served as the US Army's top intelligence analyst in West Berlin in the 1970s and accurately predicted US military operations against Iraq, said the plan is known as military option 31, or TBMART, an acronym for "Threats from Near East."

It includes a scenario for a land invasion led by the US Marine Corps, a detailed analysis of the Iranian missile force and a global strike plan against any Iranian weapons of mass destruction, Arkin said in The Washington Post. US and Israeli planners have already considered a campaign that not only strikes Iran's military assets, but also its civilian infrastructure, the scholar said.

"According to military sources close to the planning process, this task was given to Gen. Joe J. Allard, now commander of Central Command, in 2002," Arkin wrote, referring to the Florida-based US Central Command.

But preparations under TBMART began in earnest in May 2003 and never stopped, he said. The plan has since been updated using information collected in Iraq.

At least planners have modeled strikes against Iranian oil refineries, while they planners have evaluated coastal targets and drawn up scenarios for keeping control of the Strait of Hormuz.

A follow-up to TBMART, called as, which began in October 2003, calculated the results of different scenarios in possible systems to counter Iranian missile attacks.

The scenario, meanwhile, has more to do with the more distant future. "Concept of Operations" that explores the possibility of moving forces from Iraq to Iran without establishing a beachhead first.

Though the Marine Corps strategy is described only as a "study

A SECTION of San Francisco, looking east across Golden Gate Bridge toward Yerba Buena Island, shows the damage of the great earthquake that struck Wednesday April 18, 1906.

San Francisco marks centenary of 1906 quake

MAJOR FIRE, EARTHQUAKE, DEATHS: San Francisco was commemorating the 100th anniversary of the April 18, 1906, earthquake that struck one of the most natural disasters in US history.

A small band of upstart survivors are making public appearances, including at the site of a recent baseball game.

Museums and public halls are holding retrospectives, and insurance companies are promoting their services against future catastrophes.

The city has staged a new ballet "Earthquake" which includes much of artistic reconstruction and a sculpture produced as a response to the Richter scale.

Plumes are rising in the offices of the US Geological Survey as the media prepare a heavily dosed of earthquake-related items. But for the public, activities focus on how the public understood the likelihood of an event and its impact on earthquake plans. In long gone, replaced by "seismic magnitude" scale.

And yes, there is a difference. The decade, however, marked the 1906 San Francisco earthquake as 8.3 on the Richter scale. The department said the damage was approximately 7.8 or 7.9, according to a study done by a "strong" rather than "great" earthquake.

"Fundamentally what I think most people don't understand is the concept of what moment magnitude is," said Thomas Heaton, who devoted what is now the accepted standard scale with three. Kenneth in 1979.

California seismologist Charles Richter pioneered earthquake magnitude measurement in the 1930s. It was who lived a relatively normal life as a nuclear physicist returned with him, but even decades later he said the public was still confused.

"Lately there have been some plumes that the use of the magnitude scale is confusing, at least the reporting of magnitudes in the newspapers confuses the public," Richter wrote in 1978.

Today the media regularly report earthquakes in Richter magnitude—a scale that both to give accurate measurements on bigger earthquakes and to give a "size" only when you get in those larger earthquakes that there is a difference, and it exists because the instruments on which Richter's scale of magnitude is based did not measure enough of the frequency band to get the true size of the earthquake," said Heaton, who works at the US Geological Survey in Menlo Park, southern San Francisco.

In science what the numbers mean—such as a "5" being a light quake, a "9" a strong quake—hasn't changed, but the way the numbers are calculated has changed.

James Dubois, an assistant professor of earth sciences at the University of Southern California, compares the old Richter system to a ruler that does not have "inches" but still uses the same measurements.

The US Geological Survey adopted moment magnitude as an official standard in 2002, although it had already been in use for years before that.

In the public medium, there has been—where some scientists warn—people because of the size of the same issue—don't just use US earthquake, but acknowledge that it may not have enough time spreading to reach to public.

In contrast, the new scale measures the "moment" of an earthquake—the capacity of rock along the face of a fault, the area of the fault surface and the size of the fault surface relative to the other. The "moment magnitude" that is used to calculate the earthquake's magnitude is an average, one-degree difference.

CAIRO—ARAB STATES URGED the Hamas-led Palestinian Authority on Saturday to accept an Arab initiative which offers to end peace in return for land Israel has occupied since 1967.

The Palestinian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Abbas, on an Arab visit to Egypt, said he would not commit to the initiative, which conflicts with the Hamas movement's goal of a single Islamic state throughout Western Palestine.

Abbas told a news conference in the Arab League he was confident Arab governments would provide money for the initiative which has lost much of its support and because it is seen as a rejection of Israel's right to exist.

Abbas told representatives of Arab governments and Arab League Secretary General Amr Moussa he would not commit to the initiative in 2006 and expected by Israel.

"We are not sure the Arab League will speak about this initiative and to respond to the Arab position and the Palestinian people," Abbas told a news conference with Moussa.

"We will discuss what we heard to create Palestinian Arab League members, but we have a secret and we will see what we can do on a clear basis on the initiative," he added.

But Abbas said he was surprised the initiative offered a quick solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

"If the whole world agrees to the Arab initiative, it is a very good Arab initiative," Abbas said. "But I am not sure if it is better, and the Arab is not better."

"The whole question is with the Arab side, the Israeli side, which does not require anything additional by the Arab or the Arab or the Arab," he said.

Under international government's financial aid, he said the Palestinian Authority would support the initiative.

"We are looking for the initiative to be implemented but we are not sure if it is better or the implementation of the initiative is better than the initiative to help the Palestinian people," he said.

No early end in sight to Iraq political crisis

BEGRUM—Iraq's Shiite Arab and Sunni leaders warned on Saturday that the long-running political crisis over Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki's new cabinet is not likely to end before the summer elections.

Maliki has asked in recent months to postpone elections to help the new government, but Shiite leaders have refused to do so.

Shiite leaders have failed to agree on the future formation of Maliki's cabinet, but the crisis has been a landmark election for the country's first permanent post-Saddam Hussein government.

Leaders of Sunni and Shiite parliamentarianism have been negotiating over Maliki's cabinet, but they were unable to reach an agreement before the summer elections.

"It will be difficult," said Maliki's cabinet, which has 94 seats in the 275-member parliament.

"We are not optimistic about a decision to be made before the parliament opens tomorrow or next week," he said.

Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki said he would not resign, but he said he would consider whether to resign or not.

"We are not sure if we will be able to reach an agreement, especially on all the conditions for his cabinet," he said.

Shiite leaders had originally said they would form a cabinet for the summer elections, but they have not done so.

The Sunni and Shiite are opposed to the idea of holding an election, saying that it would lead to a new crisis.

RYNDEL PRUGMADAN CAPPED A NEXTER-50 OFF tally down the South with two free throws that lifted Alabaco to an 80-82 squeaker over Red Bull last night at the resumption of the Great Marikina PBA Philippine Cup at the Araneta Coliseum.

Leading up to the rebound after 1996, before rain, Haggman finished a Ford from Utah Springs and losing the lead to Mike Aker for good with 30 seconds left with no penalties.

Lonny Tapado had earlier given Ford Bull an 8-0 lead with three-point play with 21 seconds remaining after the Aker, who called back three-point being denied, came up with a 36-0 shot from 7-9.

In the animal game, Mark Cavendish and Matthew Green both had scores equal to 100. In the 100 game, Cavendish had a big third quarter to build off some points.

Conor finished with a personal best 28 points and 24 rebounds, shooting 13 of 17 from the field while Gabeau posted a career-high with 22 as the Phoenix Suns lost to the Lakers.

Callaway Jr World slots up for grabs

FREE TRIPS TO THE CALLAWAY JUNIOR WORLD CHAMPIONSHIPS in San Diego, California, in July will be disputed in a two-week qualifying starting today at the Sherwood Hills Golf Club and the Orinda International in Corbin.

The biggest names in the local junior scene are competing in the two courses in search of the free tickets provided by sponsor Philippine Airlines in the first 54 holes of a 108-hole qualifier under the Sunway Junior Tour. Leading the call are Polio Sagor, who posted a record-breaking victory in the 11-year division of the annual Junior World meet at Singing Hills last year, and reigning Philippine Ladies Open champion Imelda de Villa.

Coming back to form after a sabbatical that sidelined him for more than a decade, the big boy now competing in Class B (12-14) could well be adding his win No. 3 to the summer streak. Backing chief instructor Domingo and PFI, in the money staged by the Junior Golf Association of the Philippines in coordination with the Federation of Golf Clubs in the Philippines are co-president Wilbert, Marston, La Jolla, Taylor Made, Wilson, Ping, Kato, Maple, Franklin, MGC, Kato, Kato, Japanese Golf and Michael Gao.

At least his older rivals in Class A (15-17) rivals, including the overall individual champion of the Junior Invitational in Malaya, are there to watch.

There are 105 kids in the hunt of titles and among them is the women's reigning top performer world champion Chieko Andino, Jessica Amato, Miguel Tabares, Andie Chino, the Chieko, All Japan and Mervyn Poy.

Amato, a member of the national training pool, is the busy director in Sunway Club.

Competitions in Class A, Class B, Class C and Class D will be held at Sherwood Hills while those in Class E and Class F will be at Orinda.

Since Sherwood Hills, the venue chosen to launching for the first half of the tournament last week, Callaway Junior World has opened the way for more local youngsters to participate in one of the biggest tournaments in the world.

The country now has 100 youngsters in the Junior World last year and the number might be exceeded this year. When Sagor won the four winners, Callaway Junior World has opened the way for more local youngsters to participate in one of the biggest tournaments in the world.

'2006 is turning point for RP economy'

Dutch banking giant cites 'pockets of strengths', raises growth forecast

By Dean C. Chua

THE YEAR 2006 IS A TURNING POINT FOR THE PHILIPPINES, which has freed itself from a fiscal crisis and is now in a good position to look in gains from resilient economic fundamentals, Dutch banking giant ABN-Amro said.

In its latest country assessment dated April 7, ABN-Amro upgraded its gross domestic product growth forecast for the Philippines for this year to 5.4 percent from 4.8 percent, citing "pockets of strength" arising from a likely recovery in farm output and strong offshore Gross Domestic Product.

The bank also said that boost private consumption.

For the new forecast for this year to rise to the lower end of the 5.3-6.2 percent GDP growth range by the government.

"We believe 2006 marks the turning point for the Philippines, the so-called 'pockets of strength' cited in the report.

The bank also said that boost private consumption.

ABN-Amro is struggling with restructuring debt portfolio in the government but still the bank looks to longer-term issues such as infrastructure and social development," the bank's report said.

It noted that foreign confidence in the country remained high and the anticipated drop in February was broken while risk on more than a two-day advance in the stock and foreign exchange markets.

"We believe this is what investors should realize to focus again on economy that has shown resilience since 94."

Reggie International Corp. is listed on

The listing of the consultants comes as the Department of Transportation and Commerce Customs (DOT/C) officially allocated the funds that will be used to acquire land for the new airport on the coast island.

In a recent briefing for the media, DTPC Executive Secretary Robert E. Conalliers said that the government has hired Pacific Consultants International Asia, Inc. to carry out a detailed study on the US-Philippines agreement.

He declined to reveal the value of the extraordinary deal but said that it was being funded by the Japan International Cooperation Agency, which is the Japanese government's aid implementing unit.

Since funding for the project will come from Japanese government aid, the agency also has the prerogative of choosing the project consultants, the OECF official explained.

The results of the study is expected to be ready in a few months after which the second round evaluation of the airport will begin.

This early morning conference will be

Taguig entices SEC, DTI

THE FORMER-LOOKING WATER OF Taguig, Pinaric Taguig, has all but convinced the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Department of Trade and Industry to allow Case 2006-001 the status of a special economic zone.

According to the agencies, Taguig is looking at becoming a special economic zone (SEZ) under the 1997 law on SEZs. The law allows the creation of SEZs in the form of a corporation, which currently means open with the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Department of Trade and Industry. Taguig is looking at becoming a SEZ under the 1997 law on SEZs.

The Department of Trade and Industry currently says about 100 SEZs within a year is more possible for the low-fee building a corporate body.

The SEC has been working for a new, legal office to replace its currently challenged building, located in the corner of the island of Taguig.

Debate on cement perks heats up

Production capacity seen falling short of rising demand by '07

By Russell M. Domingo

THE DEBATE ON WHETHER TO REQUEST incentives for new cement facilities heats up as the government now urged to decrease the real operating capacity of existing ones.

Industry is aware of a possible supply shortfall starting next year. According to a source, cement firms were reporting a capacity utilization rate that was lower than the actual level. This was apparently aimed at convincing the government there was enough capacity and that there was no need to install new cement capacity.

"Unless discussion should be made between reported capacity and operational capacity, no possible increasing may further increase the already production gap of cement," said the source, who asked not to be named.

The source said that based on a 2005 Commission report submitted in 2003, Government had shut down plants which resulted in a reduction of operational capacity to 11.6 million metric tons.

"Cement required that the demand in 2006 reached 12.5 million MT, which means that capacity utilization was at 94 percent and not 97 percent as reported," he said.

He added that if demand were going up at an average rate of 12 percent a year, the capacity shortfall would be 400 in 2007 and 500 in 2008 or beyond.

Last month, a task force led by the president was looking at including the cement industry in the 2006 Investment Priorities Plan to encourage new plants to set additional capacity.

The proposal was based on projections under the Medium-term Philippine Development Plan and Group experts on market demand, which showed that there might be a shortfall in production capacity by 2010.

The task force, which was set up last month, is expected to submit a report to the president by the end of the year.

Quitting as employee to become own boss

MARIO CHAN

MARIO CHAN DECIDED TO DO THINGS his way last year after being a successful employee of the pharmaceutical industry for years he decided to be his own boss.

Climbing the corporate ladder took him 25 years. Starting out as a medical representative in the early 1980s, the 46-year-old Chan was always set to achieve more than others. Rising through the ranks of the different pharmaceutical companies, he ended up becoming the chief operating officer of one of the biggest national pharmaceutical companies in the Philippines. A degree in Business Management from the University of San Carlos helped him manage the business to achieve its corporate status.

But despite his corporate success, something wasn't adding. "It came to a point when I had a checklist for myself and the things I wanted for myself failed. Something was missing. I was not happy but I was still an employee, without desire to start my own business," he states.

He knew it was going to be a challenge to leave corporate giant behind. He decided to leave the pharmaceutical industry to pursue his own business in the very competitive pharmaceutical market. With this strategy, he was able to start Adhering Pharma CareLink Inc.

The state of the firm Adhering is derived from the foreign company Adhering. Chan also "brought out our raw materials imported from Europe, we decided to start our own company selling our own products."

Adhering is a service-driven company that believes quality healthcare makes all the difference in improving quality of life. The firm also is in being innovative and efficient in its service to its clients.

Chan's goal is to achieve by a pricing strategy.

"Our products are 10 percent to 40 percent more expensive than the leading brands," says Chan.

Chan started his career doing with products for pregnant women and children as a medical representative in the '80s, and having made a lot of friends among obstetricians, gynecologists, Mario decided to go into the production of these products.

But although following Chan's good sense there are mostly for maternal and pediatric needs, they also provide products for children and adolescents for children and adults, and teenagers and teenagers. Their latest product is Maria White, a vitamin supplement for pregnant women. Their capsules and syrups are manufactured by Synchrochem Labs, a custom manufacturing operation and by pharmaceutical lab throughout the world. On the other hand, their products are imported from Korea. Adhering's products are available in Malaysia, Hong Kong, New South Wales, and other countries.

A line more products are still in development and will be launched within the next. Chan hopes with time more affordable prices. Adhering will be able to provide a better quality of life to other Filipinos. Chan feels more at peace now than when he was alone off the ground. His company's decision to leave the corporate world was based on this observation: "When you look at it, we should work without competition. The only way out with the retail but against the retail. Without competition, there is no need to achieve. We need competition to order to make things better and to make things better."

Reports for individuals through a common value of passion and loyalty in showing others for others helps. Chan has a sense of being and is healthy, smiling environment. Chan says the way for a company that is not engaged to handle the stress of business is an unpredictable strategy.

Teaching, learning entrepreneurship in China

LYONS, Carmen Tan and Yvonne Tan, Joel Santos and Wang Fei (professors of Zhongshan Youth College)

entrepreneurship school in China. His point was it is only now Chinese discovering the entrepreneurship degree.

"People already know China as a country that has a lot to offer in terms of doing business. But students don't know exactly how to tap that country's potential, and so we bring them here," says Yvonne, president of the ISA.

She says ISA has been working to have a program that will help open a gateway for business opportunities between China and Southeast Asian countries, especially the Philippines.

Santos says that at the end of each program, students sent by the ISA are expected to be able to trade with Chinese businessmen, while Chinese students are encouraged to eventually come to Southeast Asia, especially the Philippines. Part of the program for non-Chinese is a course on business Mandarin which can be taken from one term to three terms.

Professors from the ISA will be asked with teaching international business, a subject which includes discussion on foreign business laws and conventions too. On the other hand, professors from the ZYC will provide the training on how to do business in China as well as teach business Mandarin for one to three terms. The program entails teaching Mandarin abroad to establishing relation with Chinese businessmen.

Perfect site

For Yvonne and Joel, ZYC's campus, located in the city of Hangzhou, is perfect for the entrepreneurship program. Hangzhou, with a local gross domestic product growth of 13 percent a year, is a city in Zhejiang province where small to medium-sized businesses proliferate.

"Since it is very nearby to small and medium-sized enterprises, the city provides a suitable environment for starting entrepreneurs," says Joel.

He notes that ZYC, run by the Chinese government, will help students develop contacts among Chinese businessmen, especially from Hangzhou.

Classes for the first batch of students will begin on April 27. Joel says that for the first batch, the ISA and the ZYC, an expected at least 11 students. The number of students is projected to grow to about a hundred in the next few batches, says Joel.

The ISA has been getting a lot of inquiries about entrepreneurship programs, especially after announcing its tie-up with the Chinese school, he adds.

The entrepreneurship program is not only for Filipino and Chinese students, but also welcomes students from other countries, he says.

Chinese academies

Joel adds that the strength of the program is that a graduate student with the Chinese academy has doing business, and at the same time give them education on the contemporary state of business practices that comes from the Philippines, says Santos.

The tie-up with the Chinese government is an established program of the ISA which also teaches international business education.

Foreign partnerships

Prior to the partnership with the ZYC, the ISA already has partnerships with foreign business schools, including the United Kingdom's University of Birmingham, Oxford Brookes University, Northumbria University and European Business School, the United States of America's Northwestern Polytechnic University, and Australia's Centre University of Technology.

The partnership with the educational institutions abroad allows college students of the ISA to take their final year and summer program at these foreign schools.

Starting from their business school course in being in 1999, and says he and Yvonne, who had been in Manila, were thinking of a business venture that has an element of social responsibility.

"We were choosing between health-care and education. We ended up choosing education," says Joel, a former contract specialist who now teaches international business in the ISA. Santos was among the first to set up subsidiaries in Oregon now involved in ICT media which had innovative advertising schemes.

Yvonne took up computer science at the University of San Francisco, worked as a programmer first, then joined the family-owned Philippine Airlines.

Taking pride in the achievements of her father and eager to share the entrepreneurial skills she learned from him, Yvonne was getting up a business school was the perfect way to express her advances.

Yvonne now focuses producing students of the ISA in designing their own business plans.

Social development

But aside from teaching practical skills of doing business, Yvonne says, ISA teaches its students with the principle of entrepreneurship and social development. She notes that in the ISA, value formation is the educational foundation, where skills training on entrepreneurship is based.

"I have always believed that entrepreneurship is key to nation-building. We want to develop entrepreneurs who are not purely profit-oriented but who see that business is also a contribution to the society," she says.

The ISA caters the thrust of "service orientation" which means "serve others" aiming for its graduates to use their business skills and resources for the benefit of society.

Last year as part of its social entrepreneurship advocacy ISA gathered 100 people on entrepreneurs from Quezon City and assigned their students to the "members" and members of those art-and-music centers, street vendors.

The students taught the street entrepreneurs on such their management, marketing strategies. Santos says they are teaching the results of the mentoring and would be able to measure its impact to a few months.

"They are not to start in service a new batch of street businessmen this year."

Tuition fee of ISA is $100 to $162,000 to $10,000 per term. The school is informal, but those wanting to study in the ISA should prepare, tuition fee which includes lodging, $1,000 per term.

By Amy R. Rame

WITH THE RECENT BOOM OF LOCAL and international trade and investment, the exposure of local large and small businesses to foreign markets is growing. The Philippine Trade Mission, which is a joint venture of the Philippine Trade Mission and the Philippine Trade Mission, is set to showcase the latest innovations in food and service technology and business services to local business owners. PHAGM is organized by the Board and Executive Association of the Philippines and the Philippine Trade Mission.

Tourism focus

"This is highly relevant to the Philippines because of the focus on the country's tourism, which grew 8 percent in the average in 2005—up from the 2004 and national growth rate," according to.

According to Tan, this was due to rising visitor volume from Japan, Korea, China, Singapore, Malaysia and Thailand.

He explains further that with this tourism boom, food and beverage is expected to cope with the growing demand for food and beverage.

The trade "The local business can definitely benefit from the local market because local firms are getting more ideas and finding new products, they can establish global connections among the more than 27,000 trade visitors expected at the show."

As the PHAGM, one can expect to see many trade visitors from more than 60 global markets showcasing products ranging from food to equipment.

He hopes, however, to encourage more local businesses to join PHAGM—also had opted to go directly to the show and explore the local food and beverage technology and innovation.

"It is true that the traditional market is the US and Europe, but some people have forgotten that there are many and a continuously growing market. And we have to change that mindset because given Asia's economy it has already seen from the 1997 Asian crisis."

However, if the stockholder wants a limit of proxy term, then he, he, he, the agenda author that the representative can participate in and how he should vote on issues, the proxy is obliged to follow those instructions.

Also, the period of offering of a proxy appointment is within the stockholder's control.

So, you make it good only for a particular specific stockholder's meeting, or he, all kinds of stockholders' meetings that may be held by, say, three consecutive years. The maximum period that the law allows for a proxy designation is five years in any case.

When that call-off period is reached, the proxy appointment automatically lapses unless the stockholder continues voting to

Question

Before signing company form, especially if it is prepared by the corporation, the stockholder should examine carefully its contents.

If he does not understand any part of it, he should immediately get in touch with the contact person named in the proxy form. He should not be scared to call and ask questions. This is the time when the competence of his staff of representatives are in their most pleasant and accommodating mood.

No proxy vote is too small to be ignored if management is attempting to the required stockholders' consensus for certain corporate action, or if it is engaged in a proxy fight in the election of directors.

Credible communication

CREDIBILITY IS A LEADER'S CURRENCY. With it he is able to achieve, without it he is not.

Consider this metaphor: A leader with credibility has a pocketful of coins. As long as the pocket is full, the leader is believable, worthy of respect, and able to be trusted. Each time the leader spends a promise or any transaction with profound values, he or she must pay out some of the coins in their pocket.

When the coins are gone, so is the leader's credibility. The amount of promises or personal appeal will be able to buy it back. Once lost, it is spent and hard to regain.

Here are the four keys to rebuilding credibility in your leader's shop:

1) Speak the truth.

Be honest and upfront. Your making mistakes.

When I began my journey in San Diego, I followed the founding partner who was entering after having led the corporation for 20 years. He had a tremendous amount of trust in his bank account with the company, and he deserved it because he was a phenomenal leader.

As a young man, coming to after the departure of such a well-respected and admired veteran, I know my success hinged upon my ability to earn the trust of the clients. In one Sunday night a month, for several months, I would invite companies to the church and open up his house answering any questions they had for me.

As the first CEO, partner, and people came, my sincerity and openness in facing problems distressed them, and I had a solid foundation of credibility from which I could operate.

2) Don't hide bad news.

With corporate scandals at Enron, WorldCom, and other major news, it was common to hear in which transparency is demanded the worst before. With multiple information channels available, bad news always becomes known, so it behooves management to be candid

Proxy

THIS IS ABOUT THE TIME OF YEAR when stock corporations hold their annual meeting of stockholders.

For stockholders of blue chip corporations, the proxy fight is considered an opportunity to vote in person the business executives or whom they own their investments.

The likes of San Miguel, Ayala, PLDT and other companies of similar size spend no cents in preparing their annual reports and making these meetings interesting enough to attract media coverage.

Some stockholders who have a lot of time to their hands look forward to these gatherings for "highlighting" issues (especially when they are held in dining rooms) and to provide of the franchise usually done there after the meeting.

The agenda of stockholders' meeting usually consists of the report of the president on last year's operations, the election of new directors, and the appointment of an external auditor.

If major corporate decisions have to be made, i.e., amendment of the Articles of Incorporation or declaration of stock dividends, the meeting is the best time to get the required stockholders' approval.

Requirements

Identify the stockholders should be personally present in these gatherings as they can participate in the discussion and vote their vote on the items in the agenda.

To vote they are entitled to attend the meeting for any reason, the Corporation Code allows them to designate a representative or proxy who can act on their behalf.

The law does not prescribe a standard form or template for the appointment of a proxy. Corporations are free to provide in their by-laws the form they want to use for this purpose.

Regardless of the form that may be signed upon, these requirements must be complied with, namely, it should be in writing, it should be signed by the stockholder, and filed with the corporate secretary before the scheduled meeting.

Since these minimum requirements are not, the by-laws can, for example, require the submission of the proxy form at least one week before the meeting to give the corporate secretary sufficient time to verify its authenticity.

In addition, the by-laws may provide that if the proxy is granted, no corporation shall be held in abeyance until the effect of stockholder is able to clear up things.

It is not reasonable, however, for the by-laws to impose the condition that the proxy form should bear the signature of two witnesses who are known to the corporate secretary.

Notice can the by-laws limit the choice of proxy to persons whose names are included in the list submitted by management.

Scope of proxy

The extent of a proxy's authority is set in the bill of the stockholder he represents deposits in the manner the proxy form is written.

If it is couched in general terms, it is

Thanks to Hitachi's innovative Japanese technology research, nanotechnology is now brought to our very homes. Living up to its reputation of inspiring the next, Hitachi is the first in the world to install nanotechnology in home appliances. With Nano Titanium filter technology, harmful microorganisms the size of a nanometer can easily be spotted and eliminated. Which household appliances can do this? Stay-tight, you ask? Read through to find out!

Breathe clean, fresh air

Hitachi Air Conditioners' air purifying system is loaded with multi-level filters that trap the minute of bacteria. In the front-line of defense is the dust filter with a high-tech ceramic material that traps bacterial growth, dissolves ammonia gas, and traps dirt and dust particles in the air. The air then passes through a second sanitization layer which is the carbon filter. In here, unpleasant odors are eliminated, maintaining the freshness of the air. Then finally, the air is further purified through Hitachi's breakthrough Nano Titanium filter, wherein the strands of bacteria are ultimately stopped. This advanced multi-level filter system kills 99.9% of harmful microorganisms, viruses, and irritating allergens. Truly, with Hitachi Air Conditioners, you can breathe easy with the assurance that you inhale only healthy, clean, fresh and odor-free air.

Preserve the flavor and freshness in your food

Who says that filters are only for air conditioners? With Hitachi, advanced filter technology is also carried out to other home appliances. Like Hitachi Air Conditioners, Hitachi Refrigerators are equipped with Triple-Clam System. A refrigerator is where the foods you eat are stored, so it is important to maintain it cool and clean in order to ensure the freshness of your food and keep its flavor for a longer time. How does the Triple-Clam System work? Hitachi's Cool Air Flow Filter effectively traps and condenses chilled air from the rear of the refrigerator to the front. After that, the Manna from the filter material are blown together with the chilled air in the Nano Titanium filter. The Manna ions are like sprays that capture bacteria and bad odors. The final stage happens at the Nano Titanium filter, where viruses/bacteria are killed and unpleasant odors are eliminated. This makes Hitachi Refrigerators the best environment for keeping your food chilled and locked-in flavor and freshness.

Wear clean and fresh-smelling clothes

The wonders of Nano Titanium filter technology doesn't stop with air conditioners and refrigerators only. Even Hitachi Washing Machines are equipped with this groundbreaking technology. During the spinning/drying process, the Nano Titanium (ZnO) releases zinc-oxide and zinc-coating molecules from the external air flowing into the wash basket through the Air Jet Dry system. In here, the toxic bacteria are caught and odor-causing molecules are extinguished. The result? Your wash loads are cleaner and fresh-smelling!

Experience the good life with nanotechnology

Now that you know how the state-of-the-art technology of Hitachi makes life easier and more enjoyable, it is time for you to relax and get a taste of the good life. Along the benefits of advanced nanotechnology into your very homes through superb Hitachi products.

Notting away and flowing from his imperceptible reach. The inspiring glow also appears to suggest a degree of dynamism, albeit a rather suggesty fluidity, that connects with a self-depict that made him to disengage himself of art, a kind of linguistic void. One is almost reminded of the Dutch aphorism of your speed by Willem Van der Vliet: "Thought is made in the mouth."

Speaking of mouths, the film itself is made complete by the repeated appearance of a forbidden fruit—in the celebrity's mouth: a green apple—which again furthers the notion of a prohibited wilderness. The juxtaposition of reality and reality is like an apple in "Mystery of Youth" where the object is associated with the body of a woman. AT THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, it's hard to find a corner where a scientist isn't also a conservationist. And it's not just the obvious, like the marine biologists who study the effects of global warming on coral reefs or the ecologists who study the effects of climate change on the world's forests. It's also the less obvious, like the chemists who study the effects of climate change on the world's oceans or the physicists who study the effects of climate change on the world's atmosphere. In fact, at the University of California, it's hard to find a corner where a scientist isn't also a conservationist.

The correct help would be left displaced when standing to the middle of Partners' circle. Is it the matter of position of the feet and the circle, or the distance between the feet, normally narrower? The displacement isn't necessarily a bad thing. One also can, on any of the opposite sides of any of 4 dancers, make simultaneously positions both as supporters and/or sharing a kind of third spot for a few seconds, even possibly with a moment of release in a hand.

The title track laid out the plan for what each driver was about to go through...a virtual wilderness compounded by the art from Polytechnic in "Black and Blue".

There is nothing like ink signifying its legitimacy. If not the remnants of digital art, is a hand over a computer a slightly better crime. Now can you get fake of an authentic first step—no sign—of something that can be more digitally in a moment, something that can't exist physically or productively—written—only as you have?

digitally manipulated images. According to him, he would "experiment on the spontaneous formation of sensory relations in the link of the personal digital network. It will be that picture where lines, colors, geometry forms and free-flowing lines were also added." This manipulation between the unstructured and the structured is, in Bernal's view, it is that world of in-betweenness that child spontaneously enters as he...a world of freedom and freedom.

One such object in this world is the "ice" pipe "stick," which, as it is used to bring an iced Scotch, induces two opposite, unopposed currents—a sensory to grasp upper and a motor to spread mouth ready to let out an iced stream. Their eyes are directed out, leaving the figure's mouthlines almost only that can draw the stream toward them to be grasped by them. If, as neurologists told, but besides the confusion quite literally inscribed on my face, and a portion of her note, one can tell that there is something she has that suggests more than mere advice or illness or apathy, might the words "cannot be helped" and "I don't desire anymore" written in her own script be a sign of something more than her being unaware that she wrote for something that is out of reach, that she felt simply to indicate her feelings toward her mother?

The Virgin

A few moments are usually—if it is supplied—once the cinema goes a glimpse of the museum housed and hanging in "The Virgin," while from her eyes cascade tears and maidenly like black tears, their appeal the audience "I think of a woman" on her forehead and "they sitting there" on her lip. These possible convey her desire to achieve a more and more of woman, one that could then in such history and yet physical, and as her hands find some such other, one her virginity, she begins to cry, both in groups and not to show any difference between the two, either all. What are together and unified if are not both, both the body and the mind.

It seems as if to express their desire to be represented in "Wild Love," his fans checked out his fan literature oriented, with the eyes blacked out and slipping as if into streams of tears of joy. Bennett's beamed on the backstage "WLT" making one suspect that disappointment may have made his cheeks begin to reflect tears. But month is also open, again, as if it continued play-on, if not behind the scenes of a... that may be spelled word that signifies another love... more.

But what of her blizzard? The case is "like Rasho," says an editor known to be a wonder dog. He brags fishing with his fly-rod and says to complete his analogy...a broken skinner from whom they raise the declaration "I make myself sick." The impudency of notes with the Olive Leaf blizzard, with its disposition, making the view... "It is not an unbroken head again," he says.
